Interreligious Dialogue Awareness Activity with students at Marist Brothers High School, Carew St, Flagstaff, Suva. Year 9 and year 10.

I conducted an awareness session on Interreligious Dialogue with high school students. The objective of this activity was to promote understanding, respect, and dialogue between different religious traditions, encouraging students to develop a more inclusive and open-minded approach to diverse faiths. The presentations were interactive, allowing for questions, discussions, and reflections throughout the session. The day's activity concluded with two more classes being added to the schedule, which I managed to cover within the same day. The students were also encouraged to reflect on their own beliefs and how they could engage with others from different faith traditions in a constructive and positive manner. The activity not only helped students gain a better understanding of interfaith dialogue but also encouraged them to reflect on their own attitudes towards others with different beliefs. I look forward to conducting further sessions and expanding on this important topic.

IRD Awareness in Catholic Schools: Promoting Interreligious Dialogue Awareness among Catholic Students in Ba. Institutions Involved: Xavier College -about 700 students. St. Teresa's School (about 150 students - year 5 to Year 8). Votua Catholic School (about 90 students - Year 5 to Year 8). On the 20th and 21st of May, 2025, I initiated to foster awareness and understanding of interreligious dialogue among Catholic students in secondary and primary schools. The primary goal was to introduce the concept of interreligious dialogue, explain its significance in today's multi-faith world, and encourage young people to become ambassadors of peace and cooperation across religious boundaries. The objective was to educate students about the concept and purpose of interreligious dialogue, to highlight the importance of respecting and understanding other faith traditions, to encourage practical ways of promoting peace, tolerance, and cooperation and to nurture a sense of global citizenship among Catholic students through interfaith engagement.

The awareness sessions were conducted through interactive presentations that included:

- Definition and core principles of interreligious dialogue.
- Examples of interfaith cooperation.
- The role of dialogue in reducing prejudice and promoting peaceful co-existence.
- Simple practical applications, such as respectful conversations and joint community service.

The students were demonstrated increased understanding of other religions and the value of dialogue and showed interest and willingness among students to be respectful and inclusive. The teachers expressed appreciation for the initiative and its alignment with values taught in Catholic education. I suggested to the teachers for a practical with the students and proposed ideas for future interfaith engagement activities within their schools/visiting worship places of various faiths.

The Interreligious Dialogue Awareness Program served as a meaningful step towards fostering mutual respect and cooperation among young Catholic students. By promoting values of openness, empathy, and shared humanity, this initiative contributes to a more peaceful and united society. At the end of the session, the students hoped to be instruments of harmony in a diverse world, committed to listening, learning, and working together with others for the common good. May their faiths guide them in reaching out with love and compassion to our brothers and sisters of other traditions. At the end, the principal extends heartfelt thanks to IRD coordinator and the Columban's for the inspiring and uplifting religious session.

On 17th and 18th of July, I presented a follow-up PowerPoint presentation on Interreligious Dialogue to both primary (year 6, 7 and 8) and secondary (years 9 to year 13) students. As part of this session, I introduced "The Golden Rule" poster which supports the Interfaith Dialogue with 13 sacred writings of 13 faiths from various world religions that echo the universal principle, "Treat others as you want to be treated." By highlighting this shared moral teaching, I encouraged students to see the common values that unite diverse religious traditions, offering this simple principle as an effective and practical guide to help relate with people of different religions, cultures, ethnicity and backgrounds. Some students and teachers showed concern to join Interfaith Pilgrimage Walk the next day. At the end, the students received The Golden Rule posters which will be passed to the prayer place for each classroom. A few pictures and videos were taken during the session where the students found the same values, mutual understanding, peace and compassion in 13 different religions and spiritualities can contribute to a more harmonious and inclusive society. Briefing on Women in Dialogue. (Women's Interfaith Group). As part of ongoing mission efforts, On the 18th of July, I convened a group of women from the Holy Family Parish which included the Columban Companions in Mission (CCIM) members to reflect on formation of a Women's Interfaith Group and Outreach on emerging needs within our community through Mercy and Kindness. As women are the hearts of the families, the aim for this initiative is to promote common humanity, harmony for a more peaceful world. Fr. Carlo also joined the meeting. During our gathering, a significant pastoral insight emerged: the need to form a Women's Interfaith Group committed to promoting understanding, unity, and collaborative action across faith traditions since it will be a gathering of different religions, cultures, and ages to meet in a spirit of solidarity and friendship. I shared to the CCIM members on the Suva women's Interfaith group events done regarding the meetings, gatherings around themes of our different faiths and cultures, or issues that affect/impact women, communities, on work of mercy and the care for environment and for each other. Some religious festivals by women's Interfaith group event are a powerful reminder that despite the differences that may divide us, there are countless shared values. The group identified this initiative as a concrete expression of our shared values rooted in compassion and dialogue. Alongside interfaith engagement, we discussed a clear call to reach out in works of mercy and kindness, especially to those who are marginalized or in need of accompaniment and support. The CCIM members had joined the Interfaith Pilgrimage Walk to different worship places on the next day.
