“Environmental law is always connected with Humanity for they have to both exist in order to fulfil each other’ s role and responsibilities.”

Speaking to the Chief Justices, Judges and lawyers in the Pacific.

This workshop aims to improve the decision and delivery of Justice in terms of our Environment and Climate for our Judiciary System.

This is a collaborative effort and inputs from various organization who are actually involved in the work of Justice for Environment and Climate are invited to participate in this important process.

This training will specifically focus on Fiji and PNG as these are the two countries were most Extractions and Environment Justice issues are currently happening.

This workshop is supported by the UN Environment program, UN Human Rights, Fiji Environment Law Society and PNG Centre for Judicial Excellence.

The chief Justice and Judges in Fiji.

The JPIC approach towards Justice is indeed being recognized by our Judiciary and UN body the reason we are invited to be part of this special workshop. “We stand and live by our Mission of Speaking up against unjust systems and governance and accompany the affected people for the protection of their Dignity, Rights, Liberty and Freedom.
